Mrs. Nixon, on Her Own, Begins Campaign Swing

By NAN ROBERTSON
Special to The New York Times

CHICAGO, Sept. 15 — Mrs. Richard M. Nixon began her first and longest political swing on her own for the Presidential campaign today, declaring: "I'm taking the White House to the people."

Mrs. Nixon's six-day schedule embraces seven states, seven of them [illegible] Texas [illegible] the President.

Her first stop today was [illegible] carried by [illegible] dential candidate [illegible] D. Eisenhower [illegible] trip has been [illegible] "political" and [illegible] for the [illegible] den, providing [illegible]

The [illegible] way through a [illegible] on Michigan Boulevard [illegible] a Nixon campaign [illegible] It is located [illegible] from the [illegible] Chicago Tribune.

Surrounded by [illegible] showing police [illegible] ice agents and [illegible] cramen, Mrs. Nixon [illegible] a band [illegible] Chief" in a [illegible] the tune that [illegible] dents virtually [illegible]

Sees Volunteers

Then she toured the campaign [illegible] stories [illegible] to a [illegible] There she talked with a 93-year-old volunteer, a stay-at-home woman with a record of service, who danced at President William McKinley's second inaugural ball.

Downstairs again, the First Lady heard 14-year-olds Teri Serlette sing "Mr. Nixon in '72 Is the man for me and you."

At a news conference in her hotel this afternoon, Mrs. Nixon became flustered when asked whether she thought the Watergate [illegible] would "harm the President's chances."

She paused and then said tensely, "No, I don't. The polls haven't indicated that. They know he has no part of it."

A questioner asked, "When you and your husband discuss the election and the campaign, does the Watergate situation concern him?"

Mrs. Nixon answered: "We don't discuss it, because all I know is what I read in the paper. That's the only knowledge I have, so there's no reason to discuss it. I think it's been blown completely out of proportion. I think the chairman has answered all the questions on it."

It was believed she meant Clark MacGregor, chairman of the Committee for the Re-election of the President.

[illegible] what you read?" she was asked. "No, I'm not," she replied.

Mrs. Nixon watched what [illegible] the wife of [illegible] At the General and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]